The Youth of West Virginia in World War II

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!
Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned,
As home his footsteps he hath turned
From wandering on a foreign strand! —Scott.

Foreword

THAT Americans may never forget their debt of gratitude to those heroes and heroines who offered their lives in defense of their country in her hour of greatest need is the primary purpose of this book. Another purpose is to present a work which will be a source of pleasure to the service men and women and their families and friends; and we believe we are accomplishing this purpose by making it possible for them to have in one volume the likenesses of the service men and women as they were at the time they were playing their part in the Second World War. Such a work will become more highly treasured with time, because the inevitable separations will cause the pictures of comrades and friends to be more cherished in the future.

The publishers wish that their work may not only be a source of pleasure to those who participated in the War, but that it may impress upon all the fact that Americans in the critical period since the attack on Pearl Harbor have shown the same courage and devotion that animated our country's heroes in earlier periods of our history. The nation whose life began with the Declaration of Independence has seen its sons and daughters offering their lives in defense of the Four Freedoms wherever they have been threatened by those who would destroy them.

The services and sacrifices of the heroes of 1941 and subsequent years must not be in vain. Our greatest hope is that a new world of freedom and goodwill may be attained. No other goal is worthy of the sacrifices of those to whom so much is owed by so many.

WEST VIRGINIA IN WORLD WAR II

THE West Virginia motto is "Montani Semper Liberi" — Mountaineers Are Always Free. West Virginians are proud of their motto, so maybe that is why they rally to the call whenever freedom is in danger. Before we start talking about West Virginia's part in World War II, let us have just a word about the first world war to furnish a basis for comparison.

During the eighteen months of that first great conflict, 323,383 West Virginians registered for the draft of whom 45,648 were inducted into active service. In the first registration, West Virginia had the honor of furnishing the highest percentage of fighting men out of its registrants — 64.7%. The next highest percentage for the first registration was 58.7. In addition to those drafted there were a great many already in the regular army and thousands of others enlisted. The total number of Mountaineers in the armed services during World War I was more than 60,000. Of this number, 762 were killed or died of wounds, and total casualties of all types amounted to nearly 5,000. Approximately 200 West Virginians were decorated for bravery or awarded other honors.

Just as World War II dwarfed World War I in every respect, so was West Virginia's contribution to the recent conflict greater. The Mountaineers got off to a running start this time. There were 22,000 of them in service by August 1, 1941 — four months before Pearl Harbor. The two regiments of the West Virginia National Guard were called into active service ahead of all others. The 150th Infantry went to Camp Shelby, Mississippi and the 201st Infantry moved to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana. Both of these regiments have long and honorable service records. The date for the formation of the 150th goes back to 1777 when a group of men from southwestern Virginia organized and joined the Continental Army. Other units were formed from time to time and after West Virginia's admission to the union, all military organizations were revamped and divided into two regiments. The First Infantry was for the northern part of the state and the Second Infantry was for the southern. They were consolidated during the Spanish-American War but resumed separate status in 1899. The southern regiment, the Second Infantry, was mobilized for Mexican border service in 1916 and when the United States entered the World War it was designated as the 150th Infantry and has remained so ever since.

The Northern Regiment, the 201st, has an even longer history. The northwestern part of Virginia was settled long before the southwestern section, so there was a military organization there as early as 1735. It is the second oldest military organization in the United States. It served as part of the British Colonial Militia until 1775 when it joined the Continental Army. It was known as the 67th Virginia Regiment until the Civil War, and as stated above, it became the First West Virginia Infantry after the Civil War. It was consolidated with the first for the Spanish-American War and did not serve as a unit during the first World War but furnished replacements for the 150th. Its designation was changed to 201st Infantry in 1926.

During World War II the 150th was sent to Panama to join the Canal Zone garrison and the 201st was shipped to Alaska where it remained throughout the war.

The total number of West Virginians to serve in World War II was 191,890, of whom 140,000 were in the army. The total amounted to ten percent of the state's population. The army casualties from West Virginia were 4,865 dead or missing in action, and approximately 9,100 wounded. The army dead amounted to 3.38 percent of all those who entered that branch of service from the Mountain State. The national average death ratio was 2.98 percent. West Virginia contains 1.42 percent of the nation's population, contributed 1.46 percent of the total number who entered the army, and suffered 1.58 percent of the army's total dead and missing. At the date of this writing, the navy has released no casualty figures by states. If the same death ratio held for those in the naval services, their dead and missing from West Virginia would amount to 1,754. This would mean a total of 6,619 West Virginians who lost their lives in World War II.

The Mountain State has furnished the nation with a great many top military and naval leaders for all of its wars and the Second World War was no exception. In the army twelve West Virginians achieved general rank. Of the twelve, six were brigadiers: George S. Eyster of Jefferson County who helped devise the point system for discharge; Herschel Middleswarts of Bluefield, James Malcolm Lewis of Moundsville, Robert H. Wylie of Huntington, Charles Myers of Huntington and Philip Brown of Morgantown. Four achieved the rank of major-general: Donald Wilson, who was assistant chief-of-staff, Walter C. Sweeney of Wheeling, John York of Yorkville and John Porter Lucas of Kearneysville.

The two lieutenant-generals deserve special mention. The first is Delos Carleton Emmons, a product of the Huntington public schools and a graduate of West Point in the class of 1909. In the Academy he was both an outstanding scholar and a top-flight athlete. In 1917 he was assigned to the new Aviation Branch, Army Signal Corps and for the next three years served in a number of training assignments culminating in the command of Mather Field at Sacramento, California. Later he became business and military executive at McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio and then he served as executive officer for the Chief of the Air Corps. In 1929 he became executive in the office of the Assistant Secretary of War for Aviation and in 1935 he was placed in command of the Hawaiian Air Corps Department. In March, 1939, he was made a major-general and placed in charge of the GHQ Air Force at Langley Field, Virginia. After the war broke out in Europe he went to England as an official observer and was soon made a lieutenant-general, the first air corps man to rise above the rank of major-general. After the Pearl Harbor disaster, General Emmons was sent to replace General Walter C. Short as Army Commander and Military Governor of the Hawaiian Department. He worked miracles in the defense of the islands and the famous Battle of Midway was won largely due to General Emmon's ingenuity and careful planning.

Lieutenant-General Richard K. Sutherland was educated in the Elkins public schools, Andover Academy and Yale University. He joined the R.O.T.C. at Yale, enlisted in the Connecticut National Guard and later joined the regular army as a lieutenant. He served with distinction in World War I and after returning to the states he studied at the Infantry School at Fort Benning, at the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth and at the Superior War School in Paris. After further routine service he again went to school, this time to the Army War College in Washington. After service at Tientsin, China, he was sent to Manila where he eventually became General MacArthur's Chief of Staff. He helped train the Filipinos and map the defense of the islands. He stayed with General MacArthur throughout the critical days of 1941 and early 1942 and was awarded the Philippine Distinguished Service Star, the highest Filipino military decoration. He went to Australia with General MacArthur where he helped plan the offensive which resulted in victory.

On Navy Department records will be found the names of five West Virginians who became flag officers. They are Rear-Admiral Charles Philip Snyder of Charleston, Rear-Admiral Claud Ashton Jones of Charleston, Rear-Admiral Felix Budwell Stump of Parkersburg, Rear-Admiral Henry F. Bruns of Ceredo and Marine Major-General Keller Rockey of Shepherdstown.

Rear-Admiral Jones was educated in the Charleston Public School, the United States Naval Academy and Harvard University. He is an electrical engineer and has served in all of the various grades of naval officer at sea and shore. He served in the Mexican and Dominican campaigns in 1916. He was on the USS Memphis when it was lost during the Dominican campaign. He received a letter of commendation from the Secretary of the Navy for his gallant services on the ship at the time it was lost. Sixteen years later on August 24, 1932, Rear-Admiral Jones was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Hoover for those same gallant services. He served as head of the Design Division of the Bureau of Engineering during World War I and in varied capacities during the quarter century of peace. World War II found him as Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Ships with heavy responsibilities in connection with America's vast and rapid naval expansion.

Although not a flag officer, Captain Frederick Burdette Warder, USN, of Grafton, deserves special mention. In the Battle of the Java Sea Captain Warder's submarine, the Seawolf, sank three Jap warships and damaged four others. He served with great distinction throughout the Pacific war and has been awarded the Navy Cross. His hometown has observed "Frederick Warder Day" in his honor.

A distinguished solder-diplomat of West Virginia is Louis Arthur Johnson of Clarksburg. Mr. Johnson gained world-wide fame in 1942 when President Roosevelt sent him as a special envoy to India to help promote a more adequate defense there. He had previously served as assistant Secretary of War from 1937 to 1940. He served as an army captain in World War I.

In the second World War, nine West Virginians received the Congressional Medal of Honor, to bring to a total of fifty-one the number of Mountain State Medal of Honor winners in America's wars. Of the nine, five are living and four gave their lives in the deeds that won the medals.

Sergeant Herbert Thomas of South Charleston, former star athlete in high school and later at V.P.I., was one of those to be killed. Three months before his graduation from college, he joined the Marine Corps. After routine service in the Pacific he saw his first action on Guadalcanal in August, 1943. On November first that year he took part in the amphibious landing on Bougainville. On November 7, Sergeant Thomas led his squad into action in the battle along the Koromokina River. They encountered stiff Jap rifle and machine gun fire. Two enemy positions were silenced but a third still held up the Americans. Sergeant Thomas hurled a grenade at the third position but it hit some overhanging vines and bounced back into the group of marines. Sergeant Thomas flung himself over the grenade, thus sacrificing himself to save his comrades. Not only was a Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously awarded him, but a destroyer launched on March 26, 1945, was named the USS Herbert J.

Thomas. In his home town of South Charleston stands the Herbert J. Thomas Memorial Hospital.

Staff Sergeant Jonah Edward Kelley of Keyser, also lost his life in the deed that won him glory. At Kesternich, Germany, the 78th Lightning Division found itself stymied by pill boxes, snipers and artillery fire. The only way to get the enemy out was to go after them one by one. On January 30, 1945, Sergeant Kelley led his assualt section forward to the task. Though wounded in the left hand and in the back, Sergeant Kelley refused to give up the fight. Night came before the job was finished and at dawn, Sergeant Kelley moved out alone to reconnoiter. He found a machine gun nest holding up the advance — the last major obstacle. He stormed it single handedly. He was hit several times but he succeeded in wiping out the nest before he died. The town was quickly captured then and his buddies say it was almost a one-man victory. The Loyal Order of Moose now holds an annual sports event in Keyser in his honor.

Lieutenant Robert E. Femoyer of Huntington was a navigator in the Army Air Corps. On November 2, 1944, his bomber was preparing to return to its base after a bombing mission over Europe. The heavy flak had damaged the plane severely. A shell burst in Lieutenant Femoyer's compartment, wounding him critically. He was propped up at his post and sat bleeding for two-and-one-half hours as he charted the return to base. He refused sedatives because he was afraid they would dull his senses and prevent accurate calculations. He saved his plane and the eight other men but he died one-half hour after landing.

Technical Sergeant Clinton Hedrick was from Riverton, West Virginia. On March 28, 1945, the Americans were storming the town of Lembeck, Germany. Sergeant Hedrick's section came across a group of Germans inside the court of an ancient castle who were delaying the capture of the town. It was necessary to withdraw and bring up reinforcements but the German fire had them pinned down. Using an automatic rifle, Sergeant Hedrick engaged the enemy and stood them off while his comrades withdrew. They returned with reinforcements to capture the town, but Sergeant Hedrick was killed in the action.

The remaining five boys who received the Congressional Medal of Honor are still living. Corporal Melvin Mayfield of Salem won his medal in the mountains of northern Luzon. Two companies of Filipino infantry were hemmed in by Japs hiding in caves. Corporal Mayfield carefully worked his way under heavy fire to the caves on top of the hill. He then single-handedly assaulted the Japs with carbine and grenades. Before he finished, he was severely wounded in the left hand. However, he secured more grenades and returned to attack the last cave point blankly. After cleaning it out he led the Filipino attack that captured the ridge. In the action he was also wounded in both legs.

Sergeant Stanley Bender comes from Scarbro, West Virginia. His citation reports that he led an assault that destroyed two anti-tank guns, captured thirty-seven Germans and killed twenty-six others. His bravery and utter disregard for his own safety inspired the rest of the group to the performance of this feat which cleared a path for other units to follow.

Sergeant James J. Spurrier, Jr., is from Bluefield, West Virginia. He is known as "The One Man Army" because of his truly remarkable feat in capturing Achian, France. He sent his squad to attack one side of the town and he circled to attack the other side. He got into the town first, killed or wounded more than two score of the enemy and had the town captured before his squad got in to meet him. He has been selected as the outstanding living hero of the army ground forces by a committee of newspapermen and representatives of veterans' organizations who also said that his feat most nearly resembled that of the famed Sergeant York of World War I. Besides the Medal of Honor, Sergeant Spurrier holds the Distinguished Service Cross, the Bronze Star, the French Croix de Guerre and the Purple Heart with eight clusters. Not many soldiers were wounded nine times and survived. He is now counselor for the Veterans of Foreign Wars and has received several movie offers.

Technical Sergeant Bernard P. Bell of Point Pleasant, is one of the most decorated men in the army. In addition to the Congressional Medal of Honor, he is entitled to wear the Distinguished Service Cross, the Silver Star and Oak Leaf Cluster, the Combat Infantryman Badge, Presidential Citation Ribbon, Good Conduct Medal, European Theatre Ribbon with five stars and the French Croix de Guerre. At Mittlewich, France, on December 18, 1944, he led a squad against a school house held by enemy troops. While his men covered him he dashed into the building and came out with two prisoners. He returned and got twenty-six more under the threat of a grenade. His outfit took over the building and held it all the next day against fierce German attacks. Under his skillful and intrepid leadership his eight-man squad drove back approximately one hundred and fifty of the enemy, killing at least eighty-seven and capturing forty-two. Sergeant Bell personally killed more than twenty and captured thirty-three.

Marine Sergeant Hershel Woodrow Williams won his Medal of Honor on Iwo Jima on February 23, 1945. He was at the command post when word came back that the tanks had been stopped dead in their tracks by a network of pillboxes and land mines. Sergeant Williams shouldered a charge of TNT, took a flame thrower and set out across the field of fire to see what he could do. He attacked one pillbox after another, and he had to return to the command post four times during this one-man battle, to renew his charges. He knocked out seven pillboxes in his four-hour battle, killed at least twenty-one Japs and cleared the way for the advance. The same group of newspapermen and representatives of veterans organizations that honored Sergeant Spurrier, selected Sergeant Williams as the eighth in the line of honor for Marine heroes of World War II.

While West Virginias' sons and daughters were away on the battlefronts, the home front was not neglected. West Virginia worked in outstanding performances in the fields of war finance, civilian defense and war production. The West Virginia War Finance Committee was set up in September, 1941, nearly three months before Pearl Harbor. Mr. A. C. Spurr of Fairmont has been in charge of its activities throughout most of its existence. He has been assisted by an executive manager, which position has been held in succession by Robert Clutter, W. C. Handlan and Bernard S. Payne, who still serves in that capacity.

Good organization was in evidence from the very beginning as West Virginia rolled up an impressive record in the sales of bonds of all types. Out of the eight times bond drives were held, West Virginia was in the top ten states in percent of quota sold five times and on two of these occasions she led the country. This is a record which probably exceeds that of any other state in the union. The following chart records West Virginia's war loan accomplishment:

| Loan | Quota | Sales | % of Quota |
|---|---|---|---|
| First | None set | $ 33,269,614 | —— |
| Second | $34,931,000 | 67,229,969 | 192 |
| Third | 76,000,000 | 134,729,398 | 177 (first rank) |
| Fourth | 75,000,000 | 101,603,016 | 136 |
| Fifth | 81,000,000 | 158,132,781 | 195 (first rank) |
| Sixth | 69,000,000 | 144,269,725 | 209 |
| Seventh | 83,000,000 | 139,757,800 | 168 |
| Victory | 53,000,000 | 123,742,195 | 233 |

West Virginians are still buying bonds in large quantities. Mr. Bernard Payne announced on May 10, 1946, that purchase of "E" bonds in April equalled 96% of the wartime sales in April, 1945, which was a loan drive month. The total April sales for series E, F and G was nearly a million dollars over the March total.

West Virginia's Civilian Defense Organization has been a most active part of the war effort. Under the able leadership of Executive Director Carl G. Bachman of Wheeling, the OCD took the leadership in the salvage drives of all kinds. Organizations were set up in all counties and on two occasions they proved their real worth. In 1943 one of West Virginia's worst disasters struck. A tornado swept through the central part of the state leaving 106 dead, hundreds injured and thousands homeless. The OCDs in the counties affected and in the surrounding counties, were mobilized and they rendered valiant service. Later, when forest fires got out of control in certain parts of the state, the fire fighters of the OCD helped bring them under control.

West Virginia's industries made tremendous contributions to the war effort. Naturally, her basic industry, coal, was of utmost importance and in spite of labor and other difficulties, production broke all records during the war. The chemical industries of the Kanawha and Monongahela valleys expanded rapidly. The big synthetic rubber plant at Institute was one of the largest and most important war plants built and the steel industries of the northern panhandle and the Kanawha Valley boomed. One of the most interesting plants was that of General Machinery and Ordnance Corporation at South Charleston. This company manufactured gun barrels, and during the war they turned out 131,000 of them — more than was made in the entire country from 1776 to 1940. Only thirty-five gunsmiths were available but due to their wise use in supervisory and training capacities, the company's 7,000 employees were able to work on this great undertaking.

All in all, West Virginians are proud of their part in World War II, but like anyone else, they are sorry it had to happen. They are earnestly hoping it will never have to be done again. They realize that even though war brings temporary prosperity to an industrial state, the blessings of peace are even more desirable. It used to be said that West Virginians were provincial, but that cannot be said now. There is a lot of talk about the United Nations and America's real place in the world. West Virginians are good Americans — they have been all along — and now they are ready to be good citizens of the world as well. As far as they are concerned "Semper Liberi" need not be restricted to "Montani." They believe that everyone should be free and they have given of their lives and their substance to see that this is not just an idle dream.

WORLD WAR II COST

In money, the war cost:

|---|---|
| The United States | $287,181,000,000 |
| Russia | $135,856,000,000 |
| (nearest Allied competitor to U. S. in spending) | |
| Germany | $280,000,000,000 |
| Japan | $ 49,154,000,000 |

United States agriculture produced 20 billion dollars worth of food for the armed forces, lend-lease and foreign relief. Agriculture production reached a peak increase of 35 per cent over the pre-war level, despite military drains on manpower.

The nation's manufacturing facilities expanded to a cost of $20,300,000,000. This included more than 13,000 facility additions, wth the major share of the cost coming from public financing.

In the munitions industry alone, a peak of 10,300,000 workers was reached. This meant approximately one munitions-maker for each man in the Army and Navy.

As the United States entered the final year of the war, it was producing 45 per cent of the world's munitions. Synthetic rubber production in the U. S. had been raised from 8,000 tons in 1941 to 753,000 tons in 1944. Aluminum output from 1942 to 1944 was trebled.

The United States Navy became a two-ocean armada of more than 100,000 vessels of all types, including 1,500 fighting ships, making up a fleet larger than the combined navies of the rest of the world. Just before the end of the war, the Navy announced a total of 431 naval vessels lost.

Of 60,000,000 deadweight tons of merchant ships produced in American shipyards, 7,000,000 tons were lost. From December, 1942, to the end of the war, 223,444 aircraft of all types were produced in this country. This figure includes 184,433 tactical craft.

The Army alone obtained 119,400 tanks, armored cars and self-propelled vehicles, 1,116,000 artillery pieces of all types, 18,900,000 small arms, 180,000 tractors, bulldozers and other construction equipment; 2,400,000 trucks (including 660,000 jeeps), 1,700,000 radio sets of all types, 2,660,000 telephones, 29,000,000 tents (which includes "shelter-halves" or two-piece pup-tents), 117,000,000 pairs of shoes and 7,000 locomotives.

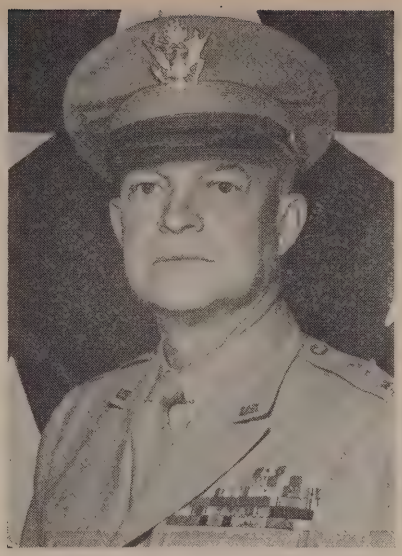

Civilian volunteers gave a total of 13,300,000 pints of blood at blood donor centers. Civilians lived under Office of Price Administration price regulations applying to some eight million articles and services.

The nation's railroads handled some 32,000,000 Army troops in organized movements.
